Dessert Dining

Singapore, 7th January 2022

Remember the last time you had a hard time deciding whether to have a sweet dessert after a full meal course? Or the common concept that desserts are usually cold, sweet-tasting and "jelak" (sick of eating due to overwhelming sweetness)?

LEARN MORE

HOUSE ON THE MOON

Absolutely fantastic food. Each dish was built around its own concept and the chef was pretty happy to talk about it. Even considering many of the dishes were inspired by things one would not normally eat, the execution was evocative, unique and delicious. The team was very accommodating to dietary restrictions upon request. Note the liquid pairing option includes both wine and tea and is not an either-or.

Portion size is a little small so this is not the place to stuff yourself, but highly recommended if you like art galleries that you can eat, think and talk about.

Vegetarian options: Default menu is vegetarian with add ons for meat eaters.

Dietary restrictions: Chef is accommodating and creative with dietary restrictions. Handled a no nuts/no prawns/no raw food meal with very effective substitutions.

House On The Moon was initially launched as a dessert bar, but due to the pandemic which hit immediately after it opened in February 2020, chef Hüseyin introduced a collection of pastas and savoury dishes to respond to the exigence of the market.

From the 7th January 2022, House On The Moon returns to the eponymous dessert- dinning & bar vision to push the envelope of gastronomy and give diners a new perspective on desserts. The savoury a la carte menu will no longer be available; in its place are two "Haute.Dessert.Dining" sets – The Eclipse, comprising of 5 courses, and the Full Moon, comprising of 7 courses – featuring House On The Moon's conceptual creations that promise to delight and surprise.

The Importance of a Website for your Business in this Post Pandemic

A website is imperative to doing business in this day and age, especially after a Covid-19 recovery. Consumer habits are changing from offline to online. In addition, there is an increase in digital adoption, and people are moving from digital platforms for day-to-day needs. Therefore, businesses not only need a beautiful website but one that can convert potential customers to warm leads and business enquiries. Our creative web designers are skilled in UI/UX and strive to deliver a website that provides a good user experience and, in turn, conversions for you.

Types of Websites we specialise in:

01

Landing Page

A landing page is a stand alone web page designed expressly for a marketing or advertising campaign in digital marketing. When someone clicks on a link to your website, they "land" on it. Your landing page enables you to exchange contact information for a trade, unique offer, piece of information, or transaction

02

Microsite

Microsites are brand specific websites (or a single web page) that businesses use to advertise their particular goods, occasions, or campaigns. These have a different URL than their corporate websites and are hosted on their own domain or a company subdomain. These websites often do not use applications.

03

Corporate Website

A corporate site, also known as an institutional site, is a website that represents a business, organisation, or institution to all of its audiences, not just its clients or users.

04

Ecommerce

An online store where you can buy or sell goods is an eCommerce website. We can help you set up an eCommerce store in no time, efficiently and effectively.

The process of creating a website involves three steps:

01

Design

The creation and upkeep of websites require a wide range of talents and disciplines, including web design: Web graphic design, user interface design, authoring, including standardised code and proprietary software, user experience design, and search engine optimisation are some of the several facets of web design.

02

Development

The effort required to create a website for the internet or an intranet is known as web development. Web development can involve creating a single static page of plain text, or it can involve creating complicated web applications, online stores, and social network services.

03

Deployment

Pushing updates or changes from one deployment environment to another is what is meant by deployment in software and web development. You will always have your live website when creating a website – this is called the live environment or production environment.

What to expect?

Working with us, you can expect to have a website that is:

Mobile responsive

Many people prefer using mobile and tablet devices for online browsing because of how simple and convenient it is. We create responsive websites and work on all platforms and devices, including desktop, mobile, and tablet.

To ensure that customers looking for your products and services find your website rather than your competitors, we use the most recent and effective SEO techniques in our website designs and content strategies.

Programme Overview

We have curated a suite of wealth management learning solutions for individuals managing affluent to high-net-worth clients in a consumer bank or insurance organisation.

WMI's unique strength lies in convening leaders and senior practitioners of the industry to partner us in developing and delivering a world-class practice-led curriculum and learning experience for you.

For individuals in a bank, our focus is on priority banking and the sales, product, portfolio and client advisory competencies needed to succeed.

For individuals in an insurance organisation, our aim is to provide fresh perspectives and new skills by adopting a client rather than a product-centric engagement approach.
